TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—The territory of New Mexico was organized in 1850 from the area now comprising the greater parts of the states of New Mexico and Arizona, together with small portions of Colorado and Nevada. In 1863, with the organization of Arizona territory, the boundaries of New Mexico were established as at present; and in January, 1912, New Mexico was admitted to the Union as the forty-seventh state. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 360,350, which represents an increase of 33,049, or 10.1 per cent, as compared with 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of New Mexico from 1850 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole. The decrease during the decade 1860-1870 was due to reductions in area resulting principally from the organization of Arizona territory from a part of New Mexico in 1863.

Counties.—New Mexico has 29 counties, of which 10 show decreases as compared with 1910, 4 of these decreases, however, being due to reductions in area. Three new counties—De Baca, Hidalgo, and Lea—have been organized since 1910 from parts of five others. (See Table 1.) It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population of counties between 1910 and 1920, to combine Chaves, De Baca, Eddy, Guadalupe, Lea, and Roosevelt Counties and to combine Grant and Hidalgo Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 122,503 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 2.9 (see Table 1), as against 2.7 in 1910 and 1.6 in 1900.

POPULATION—NEW MEXICO.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of New Mexico are made up of 643 election precincts, which constitute the primary divisions. In addition, there are three Indian reservations and a part of another, which, although independent of county organizations, have been considered for census purposes as forming parts of the counties in which located, and two pueblos, which were returned independently of the precinct organizations. The secondary divisions are 47 in number, comprising 10 cities, 12 towns, and 25 villages; of these, each of 6 cities, 3 towns, and 2 villages comprises 2 or more precincts or parts of precincts. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—New Mexico has 10 cities, of which Albuquerque, with a population of 15,157, is the largest. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for the leading cities, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of New Mexico living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 14 per cent in 1900 to 14.2 per cent in 1910 and to 18 per cent in 1920.

TABLE 1.—AREA AND POPULATION OF COUNTIES: 1850 TO 1920.

[In computing the increase from 1880 to 1900 for certain counties, the population of Indian reservations in 1900 has been deducted from the total population of the county in order to make it comparable with the total for 1890, which does not include the population of Indian reservations. The deductions thus made for the several counties are as follows: Bernalillo, 733; Rio Arriba, 828; San Juan, 1,747.]
